

DESK - MICROPHONE / XLR RECEPTACLE

NOTES:

Top photo: Shows a side view of the receptacle with the threaded bottom retaining cap. The cap contains a split rubber bumper that acts as stop for the XLR connector. When the cap is removed, the split rubber bumper can be disengaged from the cable and the XLR can fit through the cap opening for removal. The installation nut is shown below the receptacle.

Bottom photo: Is a top of the desk view of the XLR connector docked into the receptacle. Only the portion that engages into the microphone protrudes above the receptacle bezel. The unit shown is fabricated from black Delrin.